This roundtable discussion is co-sponsored by the Rappaport Center for Law and Public Service, Suffolk University Law School; the School of Public Policy, University College London; and Governance: An International Journal of Policy, Administration and Institutions.

The global economic crisis of 2007-2009 may mark the end of an era of liberalization that began with the election of Reagan and Thatcher. The crisis is likely to have broad implications for our thinking about the institutional arrangements for policy formulation and execution. Contributors to this symposium will examine the contours of the post-crisis governance agenda. A follow-on symposium will be held in London in May 2010.
